James H. Manning

To

WALTER WOOD ADAMS:

My Dear Son: I have for several years, as you are aware, devoted a considerable portion of my leisure time to the investigation of the genealogical history of our branch of "The Adams Family," and I now present to you, in the following pages, the result of my labors in that direction. While I am not vain enough to claim that this history is absolutely free from errors, yet this much I will assert, that nothing has found a place therein, as an accepted fact, which has not been subjected to the closest scrutiny as to its accuracy, and which is not sustained by the most approved authorities on the subject; and that if any mistakes have been made they are not material, and nowise affect the integrity of the lineal chain.

Quite a number of works, having for their object the imparting of genealogical information concerning early New England families, have been published, and from time to time histories of several of the various branches of "The Adams Family" have been prepared by members thereof, and printed for private circulation. From both of these sources, as well as from town, law, church, and family records, and from personal interviews with aged members of the family, I have sought information which, when found to suit my requirements, I have freely used.

In January, 1853, there was published in the "New England Historical and Genealogical Register," vol. vii. pp. 39, 40, a Pedigree of the Adams Family of Braintree, Mass., by which it appeared that Henry Adams,¹ our immigrant ancestor in 1634, was descended from Ap Adam of Wales, father of Lord John Ap Adam, who was summoned to Parliament, as a Baron of the Realm, from 1296 to 1307.

This pedigree has been the subject of controversy among genealogists, both in this country and in England, and was formerly regarded as authentic by excellent authority. At present, however, genealogical opinion refuses its sanction to so much of it as connects Henry¹ of Braintree with the twelfth generation of the Ap Adam lineage. What opinion may hereafter prevail cannot now be determined, and I, therefore, with this brief reference and without comment, leave this matter, which has been and may yet be the subject of inquiry and speculation, to those interested in Adams genealogy.

Beginning with Henry Adams, I have succeeded in tracing the line of our descent from him by an unbroken chain.

I wish here to acknowledge my great obligation to Mr. Nelson D. Adams, of Washington, D. C., for counsel and assistance furnished me throughout the progress of my investigation, for without his help, always cheerfully afforded, to solve many of the knotty and perplexing questions that time and again have been presented, my work would not so soon have been accomplished, if, indeed, I could ever have finished it. This Mr. Adams is a gentleman highly respected as an authority in all matters pertaining to Adams genealogy, and has in course of preparation a general genealogical "Record of the Adams Family of America," which he hopes to complete and publish at no very distant day.

In conclusion, I will only add that I have experienced much pleasure in the preparation of this record, and hope that you and such others as are interested in its contents will derive an equal amount from its perusal.

Your affectionate father,

JOHN H. ADAMS.

OUR BRANCH OF THE ADAMS FAMILY,

AS DEDUCED FROM HENRY ADAMS,¹ OF BRAINTREE, MASS.

I. HENRY ADAMS.¹

HENRY ADAMS¹ was the first settler of our line in this country. He came from England to America about 1634 with his wife, eight sons, and one daughter, and settled at Mount Wollaston (subsequently named Braintree, now Quincy), Massachusetts. Here, on February 24, 1639-40, the town of Boston granted him forty acres of land for the ten persons then composing his family, and he continued to live there until his death. He

OUR BRANCH OF THE ADAMS FAMILY,

AS DEDUCED FROM HENRY ADAMS,¹ OF BRAINTREE, MASS.

HENRY ADAMS¹ was the first settler of our line in this country. He came from England to America about 1634 with his wife, eight sons, and one daughter, and settled at Mount Wollaston (subsequently named Braintree, now Quincy), Massachusetts. Here, on February 24, 1639-40, the town of Boston granted him forty acres of land for the ten persons then composing his family, and he continued to live there until his death. He probably died October 6, 1646, as it appears by the town records that he was buried October 8, 1646. From what place in England he emigrated is somewhat problematical. The inscription placed upon the column erected to his memory by his great-great-grandson, John Adams, second President of the United States, reads as follows :

“In memory of Henry Adams, who took his flight from the Dragon persecution, in Devonshire in England, and alighted with eight sons near Mt. Wollaston. One of the sons returned to England; and, after taking time to explore the country, four removed to Medfield and the neighboring towns, and two to Chelmsford. One only, Joseph, who lies here at his left hand, remained here, who was an original proprietor in the township of Braintree, incorporated 1639.

“ This stone and several others have been placed in this yard by a great-great-grandson, from a veneration of the piety, humility, simplicity, prudence, patience, temperance, frugality, industry, and perseverance of his ancestors, in hopes of recommending an imitation of their virtues to their posterity.”

The later and more approved opinion, however, and the one entertained by John Quincy Adams, is that he came, with others, his fellow-settlers, from Braintree, Essex County, England. He left a will, probated at Boston, June 8, 1647, in which mention is made of five of his sons, his wife (whose name is not stated), and his only daughter Ursula. An abstract of this will may

It is believed that the widow and daughter returned to England, accompanied by the son John,² shortly after the death of Henry,¹ and that they (the mother and daughter) never returned to America, as no trace of them can be found since the death of Henry.¹ John,²

* Abstract of the Will of Henry Adams, of Braintree, Mass., copied from the New England Historical and Genealogical Register :

NOTE VII.—Sophia Adaline Wood,⁵ wife of John Hamilton Adams,⁶ was the daughter of Seneca Wood of Aurora, Cayuga County, N. Y., born March 11, 1791, died March 12, 1859, and his wife, Sophia Adaline Burnham,⁷ born at Shaftsbury, Vt., April 15, 1797, married in Aurora, June 6, 1816, and died in Aurora, January 6, 1840.

She, Sophia Adaline Wood,⁸ was born at Auburn, N. Y., March 27, 1827, and died at Rochester, N. Y., May 11, 1900. She was descended from Robert Burnham¹ and his wife, Mary Andrews, of Norwich, Norfolk County, England, through their son Thomas.²

See Burnham Pedigree, annexed.

Thomas,³ born in 1619, or, according to some authorities, in 1623, came to America with his brothers John and Robert in 1635, in the ship Angel Gabriel, of which their maternal uncle, Captain Andrews, was master ; and, after suffering shipwreck on the coast of Maine, settled in Chebacco (Ipswich), in the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, in 1636.

He served in the Pequot War in 1636 or 1637, and afterwards in King Philip's War in 1675. In 1664 he was Sergeant of the Ipswich Foot Company, in 1675 its Ensign, and in 1683 its Lieutenant.

He was Selectman in 1647, and Deputy to the General Court in 1683-4-5. In 1645 he married Mary Tuttle, daughter, born in about 1624, of John Tuttle and his wife, Joan——, who came to America, probably from Hertfordshire, England.

Thomas Burnham² died May 19, 1694, and his wife, Mary Tuttle, died March 17, 1715.

The Burnhams of Ipswich, Mass., and Norwich, Conn., are largely of his lineage, and many of his descendants have been identified with Colonial and State activities. His son, Thomas,³ was Lieutenant of the Ipswich Foot Company, in 1702 ; his great-grandson, Eleazer,⁶ served in the French and Indian War of 1757 ; and his great-great-grandson, Asa,⁶ was a soldier in the American Revolution.
